

WHISKY PERMITS WERE FORGED, SAYS
DIRECTOR COLLINS

Distillery official Arrested for Removing Liquor on Forged Paper Also Carried Permit for 3,000 Gallons
In Local Distillery.

One of the largest whisky thefts attempted in Kentucky since prohibition became effective was exposed Thursday afternoon when Samuel Freedman, president of the Old '76 Distillery at Newport, L. H. Detenthal and Edward W. Gooley were arrested following an investigation which revealed that 1,500 gallons of whisky had been removed from the distillery on forged permits.

A permit said to be forged was found in Freedman's possession for the removal of 3,000 gallons of whisky.

The arrests followed an investigation personally conducted by State Prohibition Director Sam Collins. A permit purporting to be signed by E.
C. Yellowley, prohibition director of New York and endorsed by Sam Collins, Kentucky prohibition director, was used to withdraw 250 cases of whisky. The liquor was to be shipped to David Morrison, 203 Stanton street, New York City. The permit was dated December 5.

Two hundred and fifty cases of whisky were withdrawn on a forged permit dated November 18 to be shipped to S. A. Caffel, East 112 street New York. The permit also bore the forged signature of Yellowley and was anodized by Director Collins. The whisky was to be shipped by truck.

Freedman had in his possession, Director Collins said, a permit purporting to be signed by A. M. Reese, prohibition director of Pennsylvania, and endorsed by Director Collins, for the removal of 3,000 gallons of whisky to be shipped to Aschenbaugh and Miller, a Pennsylvania firm.

The whisky was to be removed from the J. H. Rogers distillery, Mayaville.
Friedman owns an interest in the distillery, it was said.

Director Collins, accompanied by Agent B. F. Unthank, left Lexington Wednesday morning to conduct the investigation. The permits on which the liquor had been withdrawn were found to be forged and the arrests followed.

The Old '76 Distillery possibly will be seized together with the entire supply of whisky stored there, prohibition officers said. Those arrested may be tried for committing a forgery, for removing whisky from a warehouse without a permit, for conspiracy to defraud the government, and violation of the national prohibition laws.

Young Men Admit They Had Stolen
Stanley Reed's Car—Make Good Escape.

The Vanceburg Sun says:

Last week we made mention of a stolen car being held at Garrison by the thief on account of high water.
Saturday the same party accompanied by another man showed up there in an Overland car and made inquiries about the car they left. Fred McMahan informed him that it belonged to Stanley Reed of Mayville and he had been stolen, which the man admitted.
McMahan got the number of the machine and its license number and phoned to Mayville. The Portsmouth authorities were 'phoned to look out.
But the thieves were too crafty. When they had proceeded to near St. Paul they set fire to the car but had removed the license tags.

They are supposed to be from about Huntington as one of them had a C. & O. pass and claimed he worked east of Huntington. They were in an intoxicated condition.

OUR POLICY:
To support such measures as are unquestionably for the good of Mason County as an entire community, rather than such propositions as are in favor of the individual interest, or of one section as against another. And likewise to earnestly and consistently oppose all things that are not for the good of the county as a whole.

NOW FOR A LONG PULL TOGETHER.

The key-note of President Harding's message to Congress was the necessity for continued co-ordination, co-operation and "mutuality of confidence and respect" between the legislative and the executive branches of the Government. Without that, the vexing problems which confront us must be solved and Republican regime will end in failure. That would mean the resumption of Democratic control and its attendant ills at a time when our own country and the world at large can least afford inefficiency, impractical idealism, and pranks in the political laboratory, for as Mr. Harding well said, "no permanent readjustments can be effected without consideration of our inescapable relationship to world affairs in finance and trade;" and in those two realms the opposition has proved its utter incapacity.

The President paid compliments to Congress for its great work during the last session, but he is not so sincere as to express "complete accord with every expression recorded in your roll-calls" and he gives promise of some recommendations later on about renewed consideration of our tax program. His immediate desire is for the Congressional grant of authority to the administration for the funding and settlement of our vast foreign loans, and that will be one of the first pieces of legislation which Congress puts through. "It will be helpful to ourselves and it will improve conditions among our debtors."

Admitting our power to enforce the Jones Merchant Marine Act, he doubts the advisability of doing so, and he made the very pertinent suggestion that "power and ships, without comity of relationship, will not give in the expanded trade which is inseparably linked with a great merchant marine." On this subject he indicated that a plan is being worked out which contemplates no greater draft on the treasury, and the American intention to establish a merchant marine is unalterable.

Mr. Harding urged the early completion of the pending tariff bill. Business demands it. He stands for reasonable protection to American industries, not for prohibiting of imports. "In our pursuit of markets we must give as well as receive." His recommendations concerning the tariff contain something of an innovation which appears to be practical of application. He does not accept the American valuation plan as a panacea, but he does think it may be useful "under certain conditions, on any given list of articles imported," and "in this proposed flexibility, authorizing increases to meet conditions so likely to change, there should also be provision for decreases." This brings the "sliding-scale" tariff idea to the front, with Congress granting authority to the Tariff Commission to recommend urgent changes by proclamation. No longer would that body be the denizen of a bureaucratic limbo, but an alert guardian of our industrial welfare. Senator Reed Smoot has introduced legislation to meet the President's suggestion.

The President's solicitude for agriculture is marked. "The base of the pyramid of civilization rest on the soil." His recommendations for cooperative marketing fell on attentive ears. He suggests changes in the scheme of freight rate adjustments; correctly defines the spheres of capital and labor and insists on the recognition of the rights of the public. He advocates relief for Russia; and suggests the necessity of a constitutional amendment which will permit the taxing of state and municipal bonds.

Altogether, the message is remarkable for its constructive and broad vision and it will add immeasurably to the confidence which the people repose in its author.

DO YOUR BIT

The public should give heed to the suggestion of Postmaster General Flays that the use of odd sized and odd shaped envelopes be avoided. The odd sized envelopes, particularly very small sizes, cause considerable delay in the handling of mail. There is really no reason why there should be more than three or four different sizes of envelopes and if the use of envelopes were confined to these sizes the handling of the mail would be greatly facilitated. In all of the larger offices the stamps are canceled by machinery and these machines work most effectively if the envelopes are uniform in size and shape. Until recent months the Government has been printing eleven different sizes and shapes of stamp envelopes. Thus the Government really encouraged the use of numerous and unnecessary sizes of letters. Recently, however, the Department has discontinued the manufacture of five sizes and will discontinue their sale when stocks remaining on hand have become exhausted. This will leave six different sizes of envelopes supplied by the Government with stamps attached. Quite likely experience will show that even this number can be reduced without causing any inconvenience to the public and with increased efficiency in the handling of the mail.

LISTENS WELL.

President Harding, in submitting to Congress the first budget, says: "I submit herewith the budget of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923. It will be noted that the estimated ordinary expenditures for 1922 show a reduction of $1,513,537,682.20, compared with the actual ordinary expenditures for 1921; and that the estimated ordinary expenditures for 1923 show a reduction of $447,704,239 under 1922, making the estimate ordinary expenditures under the budget of 1923 $1,961,241,921.20 less than the actual ordinary expenditures for 1921." That state sent will probably not be perpetuated in glyptic, but it will make an impression on the brain cortex of the American taxpayers which will not be erased by election day of 1922. It is not a classic, but it is common sense and normale.

Scientists say we are just entering a period of seventeen years of bad weather. Thought we were just finishing seventeen years of it.

DID THIS DOG
TELL THE TIME?
Cave Wait for Birds — Parrot Was Decidedly Puzzled.

The parrot is regarded as an amazingly clever bird, because of its power of speech, although the owl, that does not talk, is the symbol of human wisdom. Every person who has an animal pet thinks it the cleverest in existence and is always telling of its instant cleverness.

A British author writes of a dog that he claims could tell time. This dog, a terrier, had been in the habit of jumping on his master's bed and waking him up every morning at 7 o'clock. When daylight saving time went into effect the man was anxious to see what his dog would do. Next morning when the clock struck seven, although in reality it was only six o'clock, the terrier woke his master. His master explained that he was able to count the strokes of the clock.

A bird fancier made it a practice to throw crumbs on his lawn to the birds, every morning after breakfast. The bird-lover saw to his dismay one morning a bird fall victim to the cat. He decided to stop throwing the crumbs and was surprised a few months later to see the cat spreading crumbs on the lawn and then retiring to his hiding place to wait for the birds.

At the Disruption of the Church in Scotland in 1843, the bulk of the shepherds went over to the Free Kirk. But a cattle did not agree with his master about this. He held by the Established Church, and would not leave it.

Every Sunday he went alone to this church. His master refused to coerce him, saying "Na, he's a wise dog; I'll no meddle with his convictions."

The cattle's conviction had a disastrous end. He used to lie during the sermon on the pulpit stairs. Below him were the stove-pipe hats of the elders. One day he fell asleep and rolled off the step, and managed to get his head fixed in one of the hats. He immediately fled out of the church, and ever afterwards, as his master said, "had nae troikins wi' relection."

For many years a pair of swans lived on the lakes in the grounds of a wealthy man's estate. One day the male swan, who was getting lame and evidently feeling his age, while sailing along with his mate, seized hold of her head and held her under the water until she died. Shortly after he himself was found dead near the same spot.

Once a young eagle was observed ablying a great game. It had found a clump of grass, and, lifting a sod in its claws, it flew up to a great height. It then dropped the sod and swooped down upon it at a terrific pace, catching it in its claws again. And so the game went on.

A parrot had its cage near the door connecting the drawing room and the dining room. One evening, as the men of the party were filling into the dining room, the parrot eyed each entrant as if trying to recognize them. As the most diminutive of the gentlemen passed in, the parrot, evidently puzzled, said distinctly, "And who the deuce are you?"

INJUNCTION GRANTED
AGAINST LABOR UNIONS

Judge Cochran Awards Permanent Injunction to Newport Mills Against Unions and Their Members.

Word was received in Newport last night to the effect that Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran had granted a permanent injunction Wednesday at Cincinatti in the case of the Newport Rolling Mill Company against four Newport labor unions, their officers and members.

The officers and members of these organizations are restrained from "taking action of any kind in pursuance of an unlawful conspiracy to interfere with or obstruct the delivery of the company's products to points outside the state of Kentucky, and the removing of material from outside the state to the plant in Newport."

The suit was filed on December 7 in the United States District Court, Covington. Judge Cochran set the hearing for Wednesday at Cincinatti, where he is holding a session of court.

The injunction suit is the outgrowth of a long-standing dispute between the company and its employees over the question of employment of union members in the mill. Until a few years ago the skilled workmen were members of unions, while laborers were unorganized. During the war the mill employees were all unionized.

The plant has been practically closed since last June until recently, when the company announced that the mill would be conducted as an open shop.

CHRISTMAS CANDIES

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

New York. — The police here have re-established the shopping district "dead line" in anticipation of the Christmas rush buyers, to protect the district from Fourteenth to Forty-second street, Seventh to Four avenues. Twenty-five additional detectives have been put on duty here. Scores of others will work generally in the shops and on the street during the rush hours. They will be on the lookout for criminals and suspicious characters; pick-pockets, bandits and burglars will be arrested on sight. The beggars are also to be checked as they appear in unusual numbers at holiday time. It looks like a lean Christmas for the wrong-doer.

—NY—

Some day I shall write a book on "Domestic Signs." I am always seeing ways in checking the married and unmarried. In figuring out the inner lives of the busy people I run into. See a man checking two weather sticks, one a heavy, cheap cotton affair with one rib slightly broken, that must have been purchased originally with the idea of being soon lost, and the other of finer material, swanning a dangling tassel, and it is a sure bet that he is married. My psychology is as follows: in pre-nuptial times no male would ever hear of a woman battling the winds alone — he would carry the umbrella over her and get dripping wet without a murmur. Let him marry and she can carry her own. For one thing it will save her hair and not have its lace faded from the drippings from his not too dexterous handling of the rain stick — thereby incurring another millinery bill!

The stage profession is rising in wrath at the annoyance given them by the season's barkers. It seems that everyone who has a pet caught takes it to the theater these days and about the time you are ready to appreciate the dulce tones of some actress in a particularly tolling and sometimes spicy speech, the bark is exercised. These noises in the audience present a serious problem. Hissing was long ago banned in the theater, and few of us have escaped the piercing glances of nearby customers who resent our little comments during the performance, however justified we may feel in commenting now and then upon whether we are getting our money's worth. But the caught is now on trial. Stage folk are unusually sensitive. Rumor hath it that a few of our great artists have been known to stop in the midst of a performance and request the respectful attention which their efforts deserved. But while many people are thoughtless, and some unquestionably rude, a cough is not to be tampered with. If you have one of those seasonal afflictions you can't just dig in for the winter. With all due respect to the sensitiveness of playful folk, a suspicion obtrudes that the performance, or player, which can not survive the noises inevitable in any human concourse is scarcely worthy of survival.

"El Gato Montes," meaning the wild cat, and an example of what a Spanish operetta is like, is hereabouts. It is known as "the Chu Chin Show of Spain." Everything that you have ever conceived of as Spanish is accumulated on the stage and Spanish just runs wild. The feminine portion of the audience is given the thrill of life in seeing an entire curtain made of a huge embroidered Spanish shawl, as fine and soft as ever graced a Señorita's shoulders. Of course there is a bull fight, matadors and whatnot, to say nothing of music punctuated by the seductive castanet. With so much Ibanez Intely and the Sorolla paintings, we are quite in mood for Castle, and the Wild Cat satisfies eminently.

UNCLE TED'S BED-TIME STORIES.

Harding Turns His Attention to Solving Important Domestic Problems

The wind was blowing harder and harder while the snow hurried in little bunches, like so many fairies chasing one another through the mists of an early dark. Jack and Ruth had been having the time of their lives all day — ever since early morning, when they awoke to see the world covered with a white blanket, they had been romping, sliding and making a huge snow man. Now they were huddled before the open fire — tired, but with rosy cheeks and the satisfaction that comes after a day outdoors and a hearty dinner. All that remained to make the day perfect was a story from Uncle Ted, and he had promises that at dinner.

"Well, I did promise a story to you little snow men, didn't I," said Uncle Ted, as he came into the room. "Let us see now. Suppose I sit right down here on the floor with you, because Jack Frost seems to have been after my toes this afternoon."

"Two big things have happened in the world since I talked to you last. The trouble between Great Britain and Ireland seems to have been settled at last with a definite treaty that makes Ireland a free state the same as Canada, and, if carried out, will undoubtedly add to the prestige of Premier Lloyd George. The other, which concerns us more, is the opening of the second session of the 67th Congress of the United States in Washington with an address from President Harding that will also go down in history because he met the people who know more than he does on certain subjects but SEEKS THAT ADVICE. Suppose you read this paragraph, Jack, and train your reading ability."

"I am very sure," read Jack, "We shall have no conflict of opinion about constitutional duties or authority. During the anxieties of war, when necessity SEEMED compelling, there were excessive grants of authority and an extraordinary concentration of power in the chief executive. The repeal of war-time legislation and the automatic expirations which attend the peace proclamations have put an end to these emergency excesses, but I have the wish to go further than that. I want to join you in restoring, in the most cordial way, the spirit of co-operation and cooperation, and that mutualty of confidence and respect which is NECESSARY IN REPRESENTATIVE POPULAR GOVERNMENT."

"One of the biggest subjects and most important covered by the president is the tariff. In a general way, he would have a permanent tariff law passed at once and give more power to the Federal Tariff Commission to straighten out the details. Enemies of a protective tariff law, that is, a law that would keep cheap articles from being dumped into this country from foreign countries to undercut our own products, feel that this would be hard on some of the countries suffering from the war. President Harding believes that there are sufficient means to avoid extreme exclusion of foreign products, or the reverse, which would be the flooding of our markets with the same products. He would have provisions that would give the President power to modify rates after recommendations from the tariff commission, so that the United States can keep on buying as well as selling and at the same time protect our markets, our labor, and our industries from a flood of cheap goods from Europe. This plan is the most sensible that could be proposed. The status of foreign finances and industry must be studied before hard and fast rules can be laid down. It would mean that rates would be changed to meet changing conditions of the world. Under such an arrangement a permanent tariff law can be framed and put on our books.

"An interesting fact regarding this message of President Harding is that it was the first time in years that Congress listened to a presidential message that dealt so prominently with domestic problems. It was the first time in years that a President addressed Congress when the United States was at peace with all the world. And not only at peace, but with no prospect of war in the future and on the eve of the success of the arms conference in making gains toward a goal of permanent peace for all the world.

"President Harding also asked Congress for authority so that he can deal with the foreign countries owing us money amounting to about $11,000,000. He would have the debts funded and power granted so that he can settle the minor problems growing from this debt. Naturally, as he said, he would do nothing as to final settlement without the approval of Congress.

"These matters are all important, but one of the most significant things about his whole address, was the way in which he stated his feelings regarding the powers of the chief executive and those of Congress. He not only does NOT want more power, but he feels that the powers of the President are too great now. Let me read that part of his address to you. It is certainly refreshing to hear a President who knows that he does not know it all, and besides it is not unwilling to listen to the advice of those who know more than he does on certain subjects but SEEKS THAT ADVICE. Suppose you read this paragraph, Jack, and train your reading ability."

"I am very sure," read Jack, "We will have no conflict of opinion about constitutional duties or authority. During the anxieties of war, when necessity SEEMED compelling, there were excessive grants of authority and an extraordinary concentration of power in the chief executive. The repeal of war-time legislation and the automatic expirations which attend the peace proclamations have put an end to these emergency excesses, but I have the wish to go further than that. I want to join you in restoring, in the most cordial way, the spirit of co-operation and cooperation, and that mutualty of confidence and respect which is NECESSARY IN REPRESENTATIVE POPULAR GOVERNMENT."

CHRISTMAS CAROLS
PLANNED BY MUSIC
CONSERVATORY

With holly berries and evergreens on every side heralding the near approach of Christmas, music lovers here who are planning their Christmas festivals will be interested in the program which has been arranged by Mr. Thomas Kelly, of the artist faculty, Cincinnati Conservatory of Music. For many years the conservatory has celebrated the Yuletide season by holding a "Feast of Carols" on the Sunday preceding Christmas day.

This year the annual "Feast" will be given December 18, and Mr. Kelly has arranged a three part program that holds much to interest schools, clubs and other groups seeking appropriate music for their Christmas celebrations. Part II is made up entirely of the old traditional carols sung long ago by the waits while the Carol," "As Joseph was a-walking" and an old negro spiritual Christmas song, "I'm so glad."

Mr. Kelly has kept perfect unity in his program by opening each part with an ancient Chorale; the third one chosen being "Not Jerusalem! Lowly Bethlehem," found in the music of the old Moravian church. In this third part, too, there are three old carols: "Shepherd Sake Off Your Drowsy Sleep," "The First Nowell," and the old Niel, "La Chanson Joyeuse" from the Gavart Collection.

These, with the Gloria in Excelsis Deo and Mendelssohn's familiar, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" make up Part I.

For the first number of Part II Mr. Kelly has chosen the chorale "Praise God the Lord, ye Sons of Men," which is found in an old collection entitled "Three Spiritual Christmas Songs of the New-Born Child Jesus, for the Children of Joachimsthal," the words and music of which were originally written by Nicolaus Hermann and later translated by A. Crull. Following the chorale is a group of old traditional carols including: "Good Christian Men, Rejoice," "I Saw Three Ships Come Sailing In," "God Rest You Merry, Gentlemen," "Good King Wenceslas," "The Cherry Tree

Part I.

These are the good old Christmas hymns without which no program would be complete. From all the wealth of material of this character Mr. Kelly has chosen, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," "Silent Night," and "O Come All Ye Faithful."

The program closes with Handel's familiar, "Antioch" (Joy to the world, the Lord is come) which is to be used as a recessional march.

SCHOOL CHILDREN DONATE TO CITY MISSION.
The local school children are this week making contributions of clothing, toys, food, etc., to the City Mission and thus far their contributions have been very liberal. More than a wagon load has already been contributed. Much of this gift is clothing which may need altering and in the past Mrs. Fountain has had to do this work alone. It might be a splendid time for a committee of local women to assist the superintendent in getting these garments ready by the holidays.

Committee Named on Water Situation
By Council—Eligibility of Councilman J. B. Orr Questioned.

Regular semi-monthly session of City Council was held Thursday evening in the council chamber with Mayor T. M. Russell presiding.

Immediately following the roll call, Councilman Davis, of the Fifth ward, questioned the eligibility of Councilman J. B. Orr, from the Fifth ward, and on motion of council an investigation Committee composed of Councilmen Dodson, Keith and Harover, was appointed.

The ordinances received at a previous meeting were read for the second time and finally adopted. The only change made was that the salary of the City Clerk was increased from $500 per year to $900 per year.

On the ordinance fixing the Mayor's salary at $1500 per year, Councilman Davis offered an amendment fixing the salary at $1200. This amendment was seconded by Councilman Breezer but was lost as only these two councilmen voted for it.

Chairman Dodson, of the special Telephone Committee, reported that the investigation had been made and that the telephone company now had a total of 1344 phones and was entitled to an increase of 50 cents per month per telephone in rentals. Upon the unanimous vote of council the committee's report was adopted.

Councilman Dodson spoke on the local water situation and advised that a committee be named composed of councilmen and citizens to take the matter up with the water company in an effort to get some improvement in conditions. After consulting with Mayor-elect Samuel, Mayor Russell named Councilmen Dodson, Keith and Harover and Messrs. S. P. Browning, E. T. Kirk, H. J. Cochran and J. M. Collins.
